SCHOOL DIRECTORS CURIOUS ABOUT THE LIBRARY EXPENSES

Discuss Question of Demanding Detailed Report but Don't Act.

MORE INSURANCE IS DOLED OUT

Domestic Science Teacher Given Use of Room and Equipment for Night School for Young Ladies; Weeter's Resignation as Teacher Accepted.

The proposition of having the Carnegie Free Library authorities submit a report of how the money appropriated toward its support is spent was informally discussed at the meeting of the School Board last night, though no action was taken in the matter. In connection with the consideration of a request from Miss Clark, the librarian, that the board install a water meter in the library so that the amount consumed by the domestic science and the manual training classes can be kept separate from that of the library, since the water company is charging full rates in accordance with the new public utilities law, President Younkin declared that he was heartily in favor of having a report so that the board might know just how its appropriation is being expended. Mr. Davidson stated that he thought such a report would be forthcoming if the request were made in the proper manner. The request for the meter was granted, the supply committee being directed to have it installed.

The resignation of Harry M. Weeter as teacher of chemistry in the High School, effective February 1, was received and accepted. Superintendent Ashe was directed to go on a still hunt for a capable man to fill the position.

Miss Louise Hench was granted permission to use the domestic economy room for a night class of young women, once each week, on the recommendation of Superintendent Ashe.

C. M. Evans of the firm of Evans & Shaw appeared before the board and requested that he be given the insurance on the Second and Third Ward buildings which will soon expire. Two policies on the Second Ward building, one for $7,000 and the other for $1,000, and a third for $1,000 on the Third Ward school furniture, were accordingly transferred to Evans & Shaw. Mr. Shaw, treasurer of the school board, is a member of the firm. The matter of insuring the furniture in the Whitley school and the domestic science and manual training equipment will be held under advisement until the next meeting.

On motion of President Younkin, Superintendent Ashe was allowed to subscribe for the School Directors' Journal published at Milwaukee for each of the directors.

Jasper was directed to be secured for sanitary towels for the schools, as the towel is being tabooed by a recent order of the State Board of Health.

Janitors at the high school building are ordered to keep the sidewalks clear of snow.

Superintendent Ashe reported that all but four teachers were present at the State Teachers' Association meeting at Harrisburg last week. Two of those absent were ill and the other two were excused.

WANT EXECUTORS REMOVED

Creditors of Late H. F. Barron Have Court Issue Rule.

Special to The Courier.

SOMERSET, Jan. 6.—On petition of the Farmers National Bank of Somerset the court awarded a citation on Lida Stahl Barron and her father, Daniel G. Stahl, in which they are directed to show cause why they shall not be removed as executors of the estate of the late Henry F. Barron, former cashier of the bank, who committed suicide by shooting himself on September 11, 1913.

The petition was sworn to by Harry F. Sipe, president of the bank, who alleges that the executors are concealing money belonging to the estate for the purpose of cheating and defrauding creditors, of whom the bank is claimed to be one. It is further alleged that the executors represent interests adverse to the estate and its creditors.

Mrs. Barron is the widow of Henry F. Barron, who in his will left all his property to her absolutely.

TANGO MODEST, IS VERDICT.

Peeresses and Church Dignitaries Give Dance Clean Bill.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—A special matinee performance given yesterday at a London theatre for the edification of peeresses and church dignitaries who recently expressed disapproval of the tango resulted in giving practically a bill of modesty for the much criticised dance.

Duchesses, countesses and bishops in large numbers were invited. The result of a vote taken among the audience was 71 to 23 in favor of the modesty of the tango. One guest wrote on her card that the dance was "so modest it bored her to tears."

B. & O. Officials Meet.

The regular weekly meeting of the officials of the Connellsville division was held here yesterday, but only routine matters were discussed.

"TANGO KNEE" IS THE LATEST MALADY; HAVE YOU GOT IT?

Disciples of the New Terpsichorean Steps Declare It Feels Like a Cramp.

Scoff as you may, the "tango knee" is with us. According to those who are affected with it, it is a cross between "charley-horse" and "housemaid's knee" and only those disciples of Terpsichore who practice the new dips very strenuously stand any chance of getting it.

Doctors say that the peculiar bending of the knee known as a "dip" which occurs so frequently in the tango, castle walk and other of the new evolutions, brings into use a set of muscles not used in the two step, waltz or even in the plain one step movement. A stiffness of the knee results and a shooting pain in the muscles amounting almost to a cramp occurs at most inopportune times.

"You can't stand on ceremony when the 'tango knee' strikes you," said a girl, who claims to have had it. "It's a most embarrassing malady, for you want to stop immediately and massage your knee, and this is not considered good form in polite society."

Strange to say, it is the men who get it first, the men say.

PRAY FOR PEACE

Mexicans Want Bloodshed Ended, But Huerta Sticks to Job.

By United Press.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 6.—Prayers were said in all of the churches of the city today for peace. Huerta, however, remained on the job and apparently has no intention of resigning, despite the sensational rumors of his withdrawal. He has always denied such stories in the past and is just as emphatic in deriding this one.

At the British embassy Minister Sir Lionel Carden declared that he knew nothing of his reported transfer to Brazil. He said he did not think his government would make such an order for it would mean fresh recognition of Huerta and this could not help but be construed as an unfriendly act toward the United States.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Heavy firing at Mazatlan is reported in messages to the War Department. At Ensenada quiet is said to have been restored.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Flat denial was made today by the War Department of stories published in American newspapers that Sir Lionel Carden had been recalled as Minister to Mexico and ordered sent to Rio Janeiro.

MACKAY READY TO FIGHT

Joint Bell and Western Union Offices Don't Suit Postal.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Belvidere Brooks, general manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company, has sent to all Western Union offices a message in reference to future relations between that company and the American Telephone & Telegraph Company. The message reads: "There is no reason that we can see why such plant and traffic relations as have proved beneficial should not continue."

"If that means joint Bell telephone-Western Union offices we shall open up the fight again," said Clarence Mackay, president of the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company today. "Joint offices are worse than joint stock, as they now admit that joint stock is illegal."

MEMBERS DON'T QUIT.

Mount Pleasant Councilmen Decide They Will Stick to the Body.

Special to The Courier.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Jan. 6.—When the newly organized town council met last night it was learned that the resignations of Charles F. DeVaux, F. J. Sheppard and S. P. Stevens had been withdrawn, and that the three men would remain in council. Council was about to pass on the applications of Harvey Mellinger and John Noss to the vacancies when the Third ward trio walked in.

The Third ward members claim that municipal affairs have been dominated by the up-town faction and assert that pledges were broken when council was organized. Instead of resigning, however, they decided to remain and fight it out during their term.

FIVE KNOWN DEAD IN HOTEL FIRE; OTHERS MAY HAVE PERISHED

Firemen Search Ruins of Ohio Lodging House for Bodies.

PATERSON OPERA HOUSE BURNS

Half a Dozen Firemen Injured While Fighting Blaze Which Guts Theatre in New Jersey Town; Fire in Nearby Picture House Quickly Put Out.

By United Press.

NEWARK, O., Jan. 6.—Five men are known to be dead and it is feared that several others perished in a fire that destroyed the Kerns Hotel, a second class rooming house and restaurant, early today. Five bodies have been recovered, but no estimate of how many were in the building when the fire broke out can be made, the register having been consumed.

The dead are: Joseph McFarland, John Ziegert, Lewis Stelzer, Gus Hogel and an unidentified peddler. Several others were severely burned in escaping from the burning building.

The fire was discovered by Patrolman Gobbs who awakened Arthur Grubb, the clerk, who was asleep on the second floor. He awakened as many of the guests as he could and then fled through the flames, his clothing blazing. Bystanders extinguished the flames which almost enveloped him and he ran screaming with pain to his home almost a mile away, where collapsed on the doorstep. He is in a critical condition.

When the alarm was sounded the guests hurried to the street. Those who did not wait to recover their clothing and belongings escaped, but others who lingered behind either lost their lives or were severely burned.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 6.—Fire gutted the opera house early today and caused the serious injury of half a dozen firemen. The building was located in the heart of the business section and only vigorous efforts prevented other buildings from destruction.

While the fire was at its height, another fire was discovered in the Daily motion picture show. It was extinguished with little effort by the firemen who stood on the roofs of nearby tenements with chemical apparatus.

Louis Shandler, a fireman, may die from the result of smoke fumes at the opera house fire.

DECEMBER MILD

Average Temperature for Closing Month of 1913 is 42.5 Degrees.

Temperature figures for December as compiled by C. A. Purbaugh of the West Penn show that it did not have anything on the same month last year as far as cold was concerned. The average maximum for December was 51.9 and the average mean 42.5. The highest temperature was 68 on December 7 and the lowest on December 29.

January figures for the first few days of 1913 were unusually mild compared to this year. Last year at this time the mercury went as high as 56 while yesterday the highest was 42.

UMBEL URGES CODE OF ETHICS ON THE FAYETTE CO. BAR

Suggests Formal Adoption of Rules of National Body.

WRITES INDIVIDUAL MEMBERS

Two Cases Are Before the Court in Uniontown: Non-Suit is Asked in the Case of Max Levine Against Dr. McClenathan, Henry Clay Damage Suit.

Special to The Courier.

UNIONTOWN, Jan. 6.—The adoption of a code of ethics is urged upon the Fayette County Bar Association in a letter which was mailed today by Judge R. E. Umbel to every attorney in the county. Judge Umbel sent to each lawyer a copy of the code which has the approval of the American Bar Association and which has been generally adopted.

The code covers 30 points in the relation of the attorney to the bench and his clients. Judge Umbel believes that such a code should be adopted in this county, and gives his reasons in the letter. It is expected that the suggestion will be readily adopted.

Slow progress is being made in civil court. The defense in the case of Max Levine against Dr. J. C. McClenathan of Connellsville today argued for a non-suit. Levine claims $7,000 damage to stock in his store because of the alleged failure of Dr. McClenathan to have the roof of his building on Pittsburg street cleared of snow. He claims to have notified Dr. McClenathan that the snow was likely to cause damage to his stock and claims that this notice was ignored. Dr. McClenathan was a witness yesterday. He was aided into court by a negro attendant.

The suit of Abraham C. Weaver of Henry Clay township against the Meadville Lumber Manufacturing Company was opened before Judge Van Swearingen. Weaver claims $4,000 damages for lumber which he alleges the Meadville company cut from his Henry Clay township property.

ELLA GOES ON A RAMPAGE; FIRST CASE FOR ALDERMAN

Mrs. Burns Does Suffraget Act in a Restaurant; She Gets Hearing Before Munk.

Ella Burns, who recently returned to town after a sojourn in Pittsburg, was located in Peach street about 7:30 o'clock last night while in the act of "breaking things up" in the restaurant of Angelo Seraffino. Patrolmen Stomp and Francis arrested her and towed her to the city hall after a strenuous effort.

It is charged that she broke up about $25 worth of dishes and damaged the cash register before the officers put a stop to her rampage. Angelo Seraffino, the proprietor, swore out a warrant for her arrest before Alderman Fred Munk and after a hearing this morning the charge was withdrawn, she agreeing to pay the damage and costs.

Mayor Marietta sentenced the woman to serve 72 hours in the lockup in default of $5 fine. In receiving the sentence she turned to the mayor and said:

"Well, why didn't you add a little more on?"

"Oh, you might come some time again," was the mayor's quick retort.

Another of the new aldermen got himself into the limelight this morning when B. F. Rudolph, who has the task of administering justice for the Fifth ward, caught a young colored youth robbing his store on South Pittsburg street. He caught the thief red-handed and held him until Patrolman Barnes arrived and took him down to the city hall.

The prisoner who was ragged and unkempt declared that he had asked someone where he could get something to eat and was told to go into the store and help himself.

By United Press.

The survivors are Fred Booth, John Cossick, George Johnson, Jacob Swanson and Willi Horn. They were six hours in an open boat south of Sandy Hook light.

The survivors declare that when the Oklahoma broke in two all hands rushed on deck and manned the two boats, both of which got away safely.

MUST CLEAN WALKS.

Uniontown's New Burgess Declares He Will Enforce Ordinance.

Special to The Courier.

UNIONTOWN, Jan. 6.—Burgess R. D. Warman, who assumed office yesterday, declared that one of the first steps he intends taking will be enforcement of the ordinance which requires sidewalks to be cleaned of snow.

The burgess directed the policemen to see that property owners have their walks cleaned promptly, and to report violators of the ordinance. Prosecutions will be entered where the ordinance is violated.

BUY CUMBERLAND PROPERTY

Wertheimer Brothers Take Over Business Block There.

Wertheimer Brothers have closed a deal for the White Building in Cumberland which faces on Baltimore street with a frontage of 23 feet and is 126 feet deep. It is a three story building. The consideration is said to have been between $45,000 and $50,000.

This is the second piece of property recently purchased by the Wertheimer brothers in Cumberland. They conduct a gent's furnishing store in Connellsville.

DRASTIC ORDINANCE TO KEEP SIDEWALKS CLEAN IS IN VIEW

Kicks of Pedestrians May Result in Future Benefit.

OLD MEASURE NOT ENFORCED

No Effort Is Made by Police to Force Property Owners to Make Their Walks Passable; Complaints General and Council May Take Action.

The enactment of an ordinance carrying a drastic penalty for those who fail to promptly remove snow from their walks is expected as the result of the city's experience during the past few days. Scarcely a walk outside of the downtown section can be navigated with any degree of comfort or safety and the business district isn't entirely free from the criticism.

Although there is an existing ordinance which gives the police ample power to require the cleaning of walks, no effort has been taken to enforce it. Complaints during the past few days have been general. Not a single section of town has escaped this criticism, which has reached the ears of one or two councilmen at least and is likely to result in action at Thursday night's meeting.

Not in years have the sidewalks been in the condition they now are. The fall began last Friday night. It was a damp snow, and there was considerable slush. More snow fell on top of that and with the freeze that has come since, the pavements are covered with what resembles chopped ice. A sure footing is almost impossible and those who have to go up hill are reminded of that old puzzle concerning the frog which went forward one step and slipped back two.

Business men who cleaned their sidewalks down town Saturday were largely to blame for the condition of the streets that night. Few of them opened the gutters, with the result that the water had no way in which to escape. Overshoes were of no use and it was impossible to cross Main street at any point from Brimstone Corner to the bridge without getting wet feet. This condition was remedied by Street Commissioner Stouffer and his men but the sidewalks in the residence sections remain almost impassable.

Patrons of the postoffice have complained bitterly against the condition of the sidewalk along Arch street, opposite the city hall. For several days the slush was almost ankle deep. The freeze made it slippery. Now the walking there isn't so wet, but it is almost as disagreeable.

Residents of the Pinnacle who find the street car track a splendid pathway during snowy weather, were disappointed this time. The slush wasn't deep enough to warrant getting out the snow-sweeper, with the result that the walk between the rails is little better than that portion of the street where the sidewalks were once, and where residents hope to see them again when spring arrives.

The penal ordinance which comes up for final passage Thursday night contains no injunction concerning the cleaning of sidewalks. This is to be covered by a special ordinance which is now being prepared. If the councilmen decide that existing measures do not afford ample relief until a new ordinance can be passed, the penal measure may be amended, in order to get the provisions in effect at once.

COAL OUTPUT GAINS

Chief Roderick's Figures Show New Record Established.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 6.—James E. Roderick, state chief of mines, has completed the compilation of his report on mining in the state for 1912, showing that the total production of hard and soft coal was 245,257,361 short tons, the highest ever known, surpassing the 1907 record by almost 10,000,000.

The report on bituminous coal in detail is ready, showing 280 mines and 407 fatal accidents. The production in the soft coal region was held down by inability to get cars and experienced miners and the unsatisfactory prices are declared to be due to the unrestricted production.

Educational work receives considerable attention and the efforts to increase the knowledge of miners by mining institutes, vocational schools and night schools are highly commended.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Glass of Salts If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles You.

No man or woman who eats meats regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidney.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidney or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juices, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.—Adv.

Superintendent R. H. Barry Takes that Topic at a Reception.

The home of R H Barry at Youngstown was the scene of a delightful reception on Saturday night in honor of the thirty-second wedding anniversary of his parents Mr. and Mrs. Michael Barry. Mr Barry who is superintendent of the Youngstown mines of the H C Frick Coke Company, took this occasion to remember the subordinate officials of the plant. During the early part of the evening instrumental music and vocal selections were rendered. An elaborately appointed six-course dinner was served in the dining room. The decorations were carried out in a pink and white color scheme large bouquets of carnations narcissus and ferns forming the attractive table decorations. The same color scheme was carried out in the electrical effects producing a very pretty scene. Attractively engraved menu cards were the souvenirs. Covers for twenty six were laid.

Mr Barry was toastmaster and also made the principal address of the evening. His subject was "Safety First." He urged his men to maintain the high standard set during the past year. No fatal accidents occurred at the plant during the year 1913.

VALUE OF RHEUMA FROM THE COURT

Judge Barhorst was Relieved of Rheumatism After Doctors Failed.

If you have tried many other remedies and doctors' treatments for Rheumatism and found they failed do not be skeptical about trying RHEUMA. Read the testimony of Judge John Barhorst of Fort Loramie O.

"After treatment by three doctors without result I have been cured of a very bad case of Rheumatism by using two bottles of RHEUMA. It is now two years since I used the remedy and I am still as well as ever. Previously I was a cripple, walking with crutches."

Such testimony should be convincing. 50 cents of A A Clarke guaranteed.—Adv.

"BARBARA WORTH" PLEASES

High Class Melodrama Apparently Popular Here

Nothing seems to take so well as old-fashioned melodrama unless it is a particularly gilly musical show. This was demonstrated by the reception accorded The Winning of Barbara Worth at the Colonial Theatre last night. Staged in an elaborate manner, and well provided with thrills, the play seemed to please. The action was loudly applauded.

Harold Bell Wright's novel hasn't been improved any by the dramatization. Mark Swan gets credit for whipping it into shape for the stage and the result indicates that he did a quick job of it. Those who had not read the book were compelled to draw liberally upon the imagination to fill the gaps. In spite of technical defects the play got across in fine style. The company was adequate.

If there has been any reason to complain of the orchestra there was none last night. The musicians worked overtime between acts and made the long waits less annoying than they otherwise would have been.

HOW TO PREVENT ACID STOMACHS AND FOOD FERMENTATION

By a Stomach Specialist.

As a specialist who has spent many years in the study and treatment of stomach troubles I have been forced to the conclusion that most people who complain of stomach trouble possess stomachs that are absolutely healthy and normal. The real trouble, that which causes all the pain and difficulty, is acid in the stomach usually due to, or accompanied by, food fermentation. Acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach and food fermentation causes wind which distends the stomach abnormally, causing that full bloated feeling. Thus both acid and fermentation interfere with and retard the process of digestion. The stomach is usually healthy and normal, but is taxed almost past endurance by these foreign elements—acid and wind. In all such cases and they comprise over 90 per cent of all stomach difficulties, the first and only step necessary is to neutralize the acid and stop the fermentation by taking in a little warm or cold water immediately after eating, which is doubtless the best and only really effective antacid and food preventive known. The acid will be neutralized and the fermentation stopped almost instantly, and your stomach will at once proceed to digest the food in a healthy normal manner. Be sure to ask your druggist for the bisurated magnesia, as I have found other forms utterly lacking in its peculiarly valuable properties.—F J G—Adv.

TUESDAY EVENING, JAN. 6, 1914.

THE TARIFF; THE TRUSTS; THE COKE TRADE.

A couple of editorial paragraphs recently printed in The Courier, referred to the fact that the steel, iron and coke business had fallen off approximately 30% since the Democratic Tariff law went into effect. The local Democratic organ, not having any ready answer for them, the esteemed and able Johnstown Democrat comes to the rescue with the following inquiries intended to cast doubts upon the real causes of the present unsatisfactory conditions.

"By the way what was the price of coke in 1897? There was a sky-scraping McKinley Tariff in that year and as we recall it the industries of this country were in collapse almost as completely as they were in 1907 under a still higher Tariff. But of course the people are not expected to remember these things.

"But how is the coke business now as compared with the coke business at the end of 1907 and through 1908? There was a Republican High Tariff in full flower in both those lean Republican times as a standard of comparison."

The average price of Connellsville coke in 1893 was $1.49 per ton. There was a Republican Tariff bill in force at that time but the Democrats had entered into power in March, 1893, and were preparing to make a radical Tariff revision. President Cleveland was elected on a platform which demanded, "Tariff for revenue only." Protection was to be ignored, the industrial interests of the country were to be sacrificed all for the uplift of the people. The Democratic Tariff policy made the condition of the people worse instead of better. There was no uplift, but there was a downfall, and it was a Democratic debacle. It may be observed in passing that history repeats itself.

In 1892, when the Republican Tariff bill was in full swing without the menace of revision, the average price of coke was $1.82 per ton. In 1893, under threat of the elimination of the policy of Protection, as noted above, the price receded to $1.49. In 1894, under Democratic Tariff policy similar to that of today, the price of coke dropped to $1.00 per ton and sales were recorded as low as 85 cents. There was a recovery the following year to $1.23 with a raise in wages for miners from 78 cents to 90 cents per 100 bushels. Manufacturers had adjusted their business to the real conditions. There was an unusual demand for iron and steel. Coke production rose from 5,454,000 tons in 1894 to 8,244,000 tons in 1895 but fell back again to 5,411,000 tons in 1896, when the price rose to $1.90. That year witnessed the election of President McKinley and the following year saw the passage of the Dingley bill restoring Republican Protection policies. The steel and iron business then entered upon a long period of prosperity interrupted only by the money panic of 1907. If the coke business has not always shared that prosperity, it has been because of the folly of the manufacturers rather than their lack of opportunity.

The Connellsville coke business suffered in the year 1908 from the conditions following the panic of 1907. The whole nation suffered from that panic. As our Democratic contemporary well knows, that panic was not brought about by Tariff conditions. It can hardly be said to have been the result of our currency system. It was the result of the shock which capital, always timid, sustained when an impulsive President started out to reform the big corporations by smashing them. The panic was precipitated by the failure of several looted New York banks. The confidence of the public was shaken. Depositors exhibited signs of panic. Bank runs were everywhere imminent. Currency disappeared. Hoarding was universal from the poor man's sock to the steel vaults of the strongest financial institutions. The scare subsided in time, but business had almost collapsed. The coke trade, for example, dropped from 13,000,000 tons valued at $55,000,000 in 1907 to 10,700,000 tons valued at $19,200,000 in 1908. Complete recovery came with the following year. Under a Democratic non-protective Tariff the big coke trade of 1907 would have been impossible in volume or value and the recovery from the money panic would have come with lingering and painful slowness.

The stock Democratic argument is that the Protective Tariff created the Trusts, and that the Trusts made the Money Panic. The Republican Tariff policy undoubtedly did much to develop American industries and make them prosperous. With development and prosperity came consolidations. The primary objects of these consolidations were expansion of capacity and contraction of costs. These objects were progressive and legitimate. Unfortunately the mergers involved an undue amount of watered stocks. This water, which it seemed impossible to avoid, was certainly a factor in the Money Panic of 1907.

[illegible] better than no Prosperity at all.

[illegible] Commerce has [illegible] city of Connellsville will [illegible] Way just like [illegible] York. By all means. [illegible] have expansion, let us have progress and let us have light all the time.

In the work of relieving slushy street conditions such as we have had lately, draining is one of the first conditions.

DEMOCRATIC DOUBTS.

The Democratic organization of Pennsylvania headed by Congressman A. Mitchell Palmer has been troubled with a great many doubts as to the personnel of the coming Democratic ticket, but those doubts seem to be slowly but surely resolving themselves.

A striking illustration is contained in the fact that Boss Mitchell has thus refused to hearken unto the suggestion of the Barefoot Boy contingent in Fayette county that the logical nominee for Governor is Judge Stephen Leslie Mestrezat, and has had himself suggested as the candidate. Unlike the other Caesar he has not waved the crown away. He has taken an option on it, and in the meantime he has been waiting at the wireless for a message from the people.

If the Pittsburg Post speaks with authority, the consultation is at an end and the Gubernatorial nomination is released from the mortgage of dictatorship. The Post says the Republican program in Pennsylvania this year includes a plan of attack on the 23th Congressional district in the hope of wresting it from Palmer. The Post sounds this clarion call:

"Recognizing the importance of the contest, and with the knowledge that their adversaries are preparing for the struggle, it will not do for the Democrats to remain idle. To hold the districts they have won, and to add to them if possible, it will be necessary to meet the conditions that confront them. The Republicans are preparing for war in time of peace and the Democrats must do likewise or enter the battle weakened and handicapped. We do not believe the Pennsylvania Democrats will neglect their opportunity, but realizing the preliminary work of the opposition, it is advisable that they be ready for any emergency."

Boss Palmer must defend what he has before he aspires to other things. He must be a candidate for Congress to succeed himself. The Governorship and the Senatorship are for others. As the boss leader he must lead in the sacrifice.

In Fayette county, Congressman Woods Carr must get his coat off and prepare to defend his title as the representative of the Barefoot Boy Combine, not only against the Republican opposition, but also against the insidious attempts of Jesse Hook Wise to grab the nomination.

It is perhaps not generally known that the country has four living ex-Vice Presidents, namely: Levi P. Morton of New York, Adlai E. Stephenson of Illinois, Charles W. Fairbanks of Indiana and Theodore Roosevelt of South America.

Paid firemen who do not stay on the job cannot expect to hold the job down.

The burglary of the Woman's Exchange and the felonious removal of five pounds of candy arouses the suspicion that the Back Porch Boys of the South Side are operating in the business center as a challenge to the sleuths of the police department.

Fayette county constables are some sleuths. The houn' dog has nothing on them, when there is plenty of snow on the ground.

The increase in the public school attendance of Connellsville since the holidays indicates that most parents are ready to send their children to school as soon as they become of proper age. It also shows that there is no race suicide in the First City of Fayette.

Under the new city code it will not be necessary to shoot bellicose bulldogs. After the owners have been fined a few times, they will be ready to abate their own nuisances by sale or deportation.

In spite of the opposition of Cumberland and other Gretna Greens, Fayette county issued over 1,800 marriage licenses in 1913. The divorce court did a good business during the same period. It wasn't such an unlucky year after all.

Connellsville's seven aldermen are now prepared for active business. As a seat of justice Uniontown has nothing on us.

The Connellsville fire department was represented at the Vanderbilt fire. Connellsville is always ready within reaching distance to lend its service to the extinguishment of fires. The cry of "Fire" is a signal of distress that humanity cannot ignore.

The return to the Republican fold is not as precipitous as the departure therefrom, but it is very satisfactory, and it indicates pretty conclusively that the country is already very tired of Democratic minority rule.

The Democratic party wasn't called, it was pushed. It came into power, not because of the wisdom of its policies or the strength of its cause, but because a better party was quarreling over smaller things.

BURGESS MAKES SPEECH ADVISING BOND QUESTION

Scottdale's New Executive Believes in Submitting Water Question.

URGES EARLY IMPROVEMENTS

Organization of Council Takes Place, With But Few Changes Among the Officers; Most Important is Combining Engineer and Street Commissioner.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTTDALE, Jan. 6.—The Town Council organized last evening in the presence of a smaller crowd than usual. As forecasted in The Courier the body did not meet in the morning, only two members Roy Baker and John Gaunt being present, and they adjourned until evening. Hon W. Newton Porter, the new burgess, swore the new members in. They were William Butler, H. G Marts, W. T Massey and J F Hardy re-elected and Ralph Stoner, John Gaunt, F R Dills new members. J. W Fitzimmons was sworn in before that. The old members were J E. Tinstman, W. W Hines, A. E. Collins, Roy Baker was absent.

J. W. Fitzimmons, who has served in council before, was chosen as temporary chairman, and F M Newcomer secretary, was chosen for the temporary position, and then both were elected permanent officers

For the position of janitor and weighmaster J S Kuhns, formerly school building janitor, and G B. Daugherty were applicants The former received the unanimous vote of the council W. E Henry who has been serving for some years was not an applicant

When it came to street commissioner there were applications from Zach English and Edward Moorehouse, while T B Gibson, the borough engineer applied for that place and the place of the street commissioner The two positions were combined by a motion and council unanimously elected Mr Gibson for $125 per month this not counting supplies or help D F Pickard of Scottdale and T A Groft of Connellsville were also applicants for the position of engineer

Chief of Police Frank McCudden was the only applicant for that place and was elected by acclamation J S Hough Austin Heil and Harry H Faith the latter two officers applied for the place of patrolmen The roll was called each member as naming his preference of two and Heil and Faith were unanimously chosen Immediately following the meeting they were sworn in by the burgess

Harry Laughrey was unanimously re-elected borough treasurer and the secretary was instructed to notify the bankers' boards that bids will be considered for the handling of the borough funds

President Fitzimmons named his finance committee Messrs Butler Tinstman and Hardy and on the street committee Messrs Collins Hardy and Tinstman Other committees will be announced later The president made a brief speech thanking the members for this honor they had conferred upon him and assuring them that he would do the best he could.

Burgess Porter gave a brief inaugural message to council advising that with the questions unsettled in the national political and economical world the trades conditions and other factors affecting the wage earners that council should endeavor to lay low a millage rate as consistent He further suggested that any public improvements should be taken up early so that the would not drag over into bad weather The borough ordinances he said are in such shape from obsolete legislation and numerous amendments that they are unsafe to be guided by and advised that all the ordinances be revised and codified up to date

He declared himself in favor of the referendum and suggested that the borough attorney be instructed to draft an ordinance to be submitted to the voters at the next election on the question of whether the bonded indebtedness be increased not to exceed seven per centum over and above all other indebtedness with the view of buying the water works.

The last section of the burgess' message was greeted with applause Following adjournment there was a little gathering about the room for a few minutes and the first meeting of the year was over

FRAN

BY

JOHN BRECKENRIDGE ELLIS

ILLUSTRATIONS BY O·IRWIN·MYERS

(COPYRIGHT 1912 BOBBS-MERRILL CO.)

Fran lost control over herself. "Do you think, knowing what I know, that I'll stand quietly by and see you disgrace your wife as you disgraced . . . Do you think I'll let you have this Grace Noir for your . . . to be the third— Do you think I've come out of your past life to fold my hands? I tell you plainly that I'll ruin you with that secret before I'll let you have this woman."

Gregory beheld the awful secret quivering upon her lips. The danger

"You Devil!"

drove him mad "You devil!" he shouted, rushing upon her

Fran stood immovable, her eyes fastened on his. "Don't strike me," she said tensely, "don't strike me, I warn you, unless you kill at the first blow."

He staggered back as if her words possessed physical impact. He shrunk in a heap in the library chair and dropped his head upon his arms. To prevent Grace from learning the truth, he could have done almost anything in that first moment of insane terror, but he could not strike Fran.

In the meantime, Mrs. Gregory had been ascending the stairs They could hear her now, as she softly moved along the hall. No one in the library wished, at that moment to confront the wife, and absolute silence reigned in the apartment. They heard her pause, when opposite the door, doubtless to assure herself that the typewriter was at work. If she did not hear the clicking of the keys, she might conclude Grace was absent, and enter.

Gregory raised his haggard head with an air suggesting meditated flight. Even Grace cowered back instinctively

Swift as a shadow, Fran darted on tiptoe to the typewriter, and began pounding upon it vigorously.

Mrs. Gregory passed on her way, and when she reached the farther end of the hall, an old hymn which she had been humming, broke into audible words Fran snatched the sheet from the typewriter, and bent her head to listen The words were soft, full of a thrilling faith, a dauntless courage—

"Still all my song shall be
Nearer my God to Thee,
Nearer—"

A door closed She was gone. Gregory dropped his head with a groan.

It seemed to Fran that the voice of his wife who was not a wife, lingered in the room The hymn, no longer audible, had left behind it a fragrance, as sometimes lingers the sweet savor of a prayer, after its "amen" has, as it were, dropped back into the heart whence it issued Fran instinctively held out both arms toward the direction of the door just closed, as if she could see Mrs. Gregory kneeling behind it.

"Almost" she said, in a solemn undertone, "thou persuadest me to be a Christian"

Had anyone but Mrs Gregory been singing that hymn, had anyone but Fran been the one to intrude upon the library scene, Grace must have been overwhelmed As it was, she stood quite untouched, resolving to stay in order to prove herself, and to show Gregory that they must sacrifice their love for conscience sake.

Gregory, however, was deeply touched by Fran's yearning arms He rose and stood before her. "Fran, child, we promise that what you saw shall never happen again But you mustn't tell about it I know you won't . . . I can't send Grace away, because I need her She will not go because she knows herself to be strong We are going to hide our souls And you can't tell what you've seen, on account of her—" He pointed in the direction of his wife.

Fran knew very well what he meant. If she told the secret, it would disgrace Mrs Gregory The revelation might drive Grace mad though Fran did not think so, but certainly whether Grace went, or stayed, it would break the heart of the one she loved best in that home. Gregory was right; Fran could never betray him.

She turned blindly upon Grace: "Then have you no conscience?—you are always talking about one. Does no sense of danger warn you away? Can't you feel my shame?"

Grace did not smile contemptuously. She weighed these words at their real value, and soberly interrogated herself. "No," she declared with deliberation, "I feel no sense of danger because I mean to guard myself after this. And my conscience bids me stay, to show that I have not really done anything—" But she could not deny the feeling of shame, for the burning of her cheeks proved the recollection of hot kisses.

"But suppose I tell what I have seen"

"Well," said Grace, flashing out defiantly, "and suppose you do!"

Gregory muttered "Who would believe you?"

Fran looked at him. "Then," she said, "the coward spoke." She added. "I guess the only way is for you to make her leave. There's nothing in her for me to appeal to."

"I will never tell her to go," he assured her defiantly

"While, on the contrary," said Grace, "I fancy you will be put to flight in three or four days."

Fran threw back her head and laughed silently while they stared at her in blank perplexity.

Fran regained composure to say coolly, "I was just laughing" Then she stepped to her father's chair and handed him the sheet she had drawn from the typewriter The upper part was an unfinished letter to the Chicago mission, just as Grace had left it in her haste to get rid of Fran. At odd variance with its philanthropic message were the words Fran had pounded out for the deception of Mrs. Gregory

Hamilton Gregory glared at them at first uncomprehendingly, then in growing amazement. They read—

"Ask her why she sent Bob Clinton to Springfield."

He started up. "What is this?" he exclaimed wildly, extending the paper toward Grace.

She read it and smiled coldly. "Yes," she said, "the little spy has even ferreted that out, has she! Very well, she won't be so cool when Mr. Clinton returns from Springfield"

"From Springfield!" echoed Gregory aghast.

"From Springfield Mr. Gregory, I have made the discovery that this Fran, whom you imagined only about sixteen years old, and the daughter of an old friend, is really of age She's nothing but a circus-girl You thought her joking when she called herself a lion-tamer; that's the way she meant for us to take it—but she can't deceive me She's nothing but a show-girl pretending to come from Springfield But I know better So I've sent Mr. Clinton there to find out all about the family of your friend, and in particular about the girl that this Fran is impersonating"

"You sent Bob Clinton to Springfield!" gasped Gregory, as if his mind could get no further than that. Then he turned savagely upon Fran—"And did you tell her about Springfield?"

Fran smiled her crooked smile.

Grace interposed· "You may be sure she didn't! Do you think she wanted her history cleared up? Mr. Gregory you are so blinded by what she says that you won't investigate her claims I decided to do this for your sake Whon Mr. Clinton comes back, it's good-by to this circus-girl!"

Fran looked at her father inscrutably "I believe, after this," she said, "it will be safe to leave you two together."

CHAPTER XVII.

Shall the Secret Be Told?

Fran had expected Robert Clinton's return in four or five days, as had Grace Noir, but secrets that have been buried for many years are not picked up in a day. However, had the chairman of the school-board returned the day after his departure, Abbott Ashton would have met him at the station Twice, in the opinion of Fran, the young man had failed her by allowing Grace's mind to flash to important discoveries along the path of his insulated remarks about the weather This third test was more equal, since he was to deal with no Grace Noir—merely with a man.

As Littleburg had only one railroad, and it a "branch," it was not difficult to meet every train; moreover, Miss Sapphira's hasty notes from her brother kept Abbott advised. At first Miss Sapphira said, "It will be a week;" later—"Then day more—and the business left like this!" Then came the final bulletin· "I may come tomorrow. Look for me when you see me"

What the secret was that Abbott must prevent Clinton from divulging he did not care to guess; doubtless the picture of Gregory's past, with its face to the wall, might be inscribed "Some other woman!" For surely Grace Noir was some other woman.

With these thoughts, Abbott met the evening train, to see Robert Clinton hastily emerge from the solitude he had endured in the midst of many.

Robert was in no pacific mood, and when he found himself almost in the arms of Abbott, his greeting was boisterous because impatient at being stopped. Abbott, knowing that Robert was not ordinarily offensive, thought,

"He has the secret!"

Robert shook hands without delaying progress toward the waiting hack, bearing Abbott along on waves of greeting.

"But surely you are not going to ride!" Abbott expostulated.

"Business—very pressing—see you later."

"But I have business with you, Mr. Clinton, that can't wait. Come, walk with me to town and I'll explain; it'll delay you only a few minutes."

Like a restive horse on finding himself restrained, Robert Clinton lifted a leg without advancing. "Oh, very well," he agreed. "In fact, I've something important for you, old fellow, and I'll explain before I—before the—yes, before," he ended, turning his back with a smothered growl

"Lucky I was at the station," Abbott exclaimed, "since you've something to tell me, Bob. What is it?" In thus addressing his old friend as "Bob" the young man was officially declaring that their relationship as teacher and school-director was forever at an end, and they stood as man to man.

Clinton spoke rapidly, with his wonted bruskness: "Guess you know I've been knocking about the country for the last three or four weeks—saw a good many old friends—a fellow can't go anywhere without meeting somebody he knows—curious, isn't it? Well, I've just got an opening for you You know how sorry I am because we had to plump another teacher on to your job, but don't you worry if Fran did hold your hand—just you keep your hands in your pockets after this, when there's danger—Say! I've got something lots better for you than Littleburg. School out in Oklahoma—rich—private man behind it—he owns the whole plant, and he's determined to run it to suit the new ideas. This rich man—chum of mine—went West, bought land, sat on it, got up with his jeans full of money. Wants you to come at once."

Abbott was elated. "What kind of new ideas, Bob?" he asked joyously.

"Of that impractical nonsense of teaching life instead of books. You know what I mean, but I don't think I do. Don't worry about it now—something terrible's on my mind—just awful! I can't think of anything else. What you want to do is to scoot out to Tahlelah, Oklahoma, to this address—here's his card—tell 'em Bob sent you—" He looked at Abbott feverishly, as if almost hoping Abbott would bolt for Tahlelah then and there. His broad red face was set determinedly.

"This news is splendid!" Abbott declared enthusiastically. "I had already applied for a country school; I was afraid I had lost out a whole year, on account of—everything. I must thank—"

"Abbott, I don't want to be thanked. I haven't got time to be thanked. Yonder's Hamilton Gregory's house and that's where I'm bound—good night—"

"But, Bob, I haven't told you my business—"

"I'll hear it later, old fellow—dear old fellow—I think a heap of you, old Abb. But I must go now—"

"No, you mustn't. Before you go into that house, we must have a little talk. We can't talk here—people are coming and going—"

"I don't want to talk here, bless you! I want to go in that house. My business is private and pressing." The gate was but a few yards away; he looked at it fixedly, but Abbott held his hand upon the agitated arm.

"Bob, what I have to tell you can't wait, and that's all about it. I won't keep you long, just turn down this alley with me, for it's a matter of life and death."

"Confound your life and death! My business is life and death, too"

At that moment, a light was turned on in Gregory's library, and Grace Noir was seen to pass the window.

Abbott's hand tightened on the other's arm, as he urged, "Down that alley, a nice dark place for talking—"

"'Nice dark,' be hanged!" growled Robert. 'What business can you have with me that wouldn't wait till morning? Look here, I'm desperate!"

"So am I," retorted Abbott. "Bob, you've been to Springfield."

Robert Clinton snatched open the

"Business—Very Pressing—See You Later."

yard-gate, muttering, "That's my business."

"Miss Noir sent you to unearth a secret."

"Oh!" exclaimed Robert, in an altered tone, stopping in the gateway, 'did she tell you about it?"

"No—but you've brought back that secret, and you must not tell it to Miss Noir"

"Not tell her? That's funny!" Robert produced a sound which he expected to pass as laughter. "So that's what you wanted to tell me, is it? Do you know what the secret is?"

"I do not. But you mustn't tell it."

"However, that's what I'm going to do, as soon as I reach that door—take your hand off, man, my blood's up, by George! Can't you see my blood's up? It's a-boiling, that's what it's doing! So all you want is to ask me not to tell that secret?"

"Not exactly all."

"Well, well—quick! What else?"

"To see that you don't tell it."

"How do you mean to 'see' that I don't tell it?"

"You will listen to reason, Bob," said Abbott persuasively.

"No, I won't!" cried Robert. "Not me! No, sir! I'm going to tell this minute."

"You shall not!" said Abbott, in a lower and more compelling tone His manner was so absolute, that Robert Clinton, who had forced his way almost to the porch-steps, was slightly moved.

"See here, Abbott—say! Fran knows all about it, and you pretend to think a good deal of her. Well, it's to her interests for the whole affair to be laid open to the world"

"I think so much of Fran," was the low and earnest rejoinder, "that if I were better fixed, I'd ask her to marry me without a moment's delay. And I think enough of her, not to ask her to marry me, until I have a good position. Now it was Fran who asked me to see that you didn't betray the secret. And I think so much of her, that I'm going to see that you don't!"

"Is It Possible That Fran Is Mr. Gregory's Daughter?"

For a moment Clinton was silent; then he said in desperation: "Where is your nice dark alley? Come on, then, let's get in it!"

When they were safe from interruption, Clinton resumed. "You tell me that Fran wants that secret kept? I'd think she'd want it told everywhere. This secret is nothing at all but the wrong that was done Fran and her mother. And since you are so frank about how you like Fran, I'll follow suit and say that I have asked Grace Noir to marry me, and I know I'll stand a better show by getting her out of the hypnotic spell of that miserable scoundrel who poses as a bleating sheep—"

Abbott interrupted. "The wrong done Fran? How do you mean?"

"Why, man, that—that hypocrite in wool, that weed that infests the ground, that—"

"In short, Mr. Gregory? But what about the wrong done Fran?"

"Ain't I telling you? That worm-eaten pillar of the church that's made me lose so much faith in religion that I ain't got enough left worth the postage stamp to mail it back to the revival meeting where it came from—"

"For heaven's sake, Bob, tell me what wrong Mr. Gregory did Fran!"

"Didn't he marry Fran's mother when he was a college chap in Springfield, and then desert her? Didn't he marry again, although his first wife—Fran's mother—was living, and hadn't been divorced? Don't he refuse to acknowledge Fran as his daughter, making her pass herself off as the daughter of some old college chum? That's what he did, your choir-leader! I'd like to see that baton of his laid over his back; I'd like to lay it, myself"

It was impossible for Abbott to receive all this as a whole; he took up the revelations one at a time. "Is it possible that Fran is Mr. Gregory's daughter?"

"Oh, she's his, all right, only child of his only legal wife—that's why she came, thinking her father would do the right thing, him that's always praying to be guided aright, and balking whenever the halter's pulled straight."

"Then," Abbott stammered, "Mrs. Gregory is . . ."

"Yap; is with a question mark. But there's one thing she isn't; she isn't the legal wife of this pirate what's always a-preying upon the consciences of folks that thinks they're worse than him."

"As for Mr. Gregory," Abbott began sternly—

Robert pursued the name with a vigorous expletive, and growled, 'One thing, Mr. Gregory has done for me, he's opened the flood-gates that have been so long dammed—yes, I say jammed—I say—"

"Bob," Abbott exclaimed, "don't you understand Fran's object in keeping the secret? It's on account of Mrs. Gregory. If she finds it out—that she's not legally married—don't you see? Of course it would be to Fran's interests—bless her heart! What a—what a Nonpareil!"

"'Tain't natural," returned Clinton, "for any girl to consult the interests of a woman that's supplanted her mother. No, Fran's afraid to have it told for fear she'd be injured by your cut-glass paragon, your religion-stuffed pillow that calls itself a man."

"Fran afraid? That's a joke! I tell you, she's thinking only of Mr Gregory"

"I'm sorry for Mrs. Gregory," Robert allowed, "but Grace Noir is more to me than any other woman on earth. You don't see the point. When I think of a girl like Grace Noir living under the same roof with that—that—"

"Mr. Gregory," Abbott supplied.

"—And she so pure, so high, so much above us. . . . It makes me crazy. And all the time she's been breathing the same air, she's thought him a Moses in the Wilderness, and us nothing but the sticks. Think of her believing in that jelly pulp, that steel engraving in a Family Bible! No, I mean to open her eyes; and get her out of his spider's web."

"I see your point of view"

"You do if you have eyes. Think of that perfect angel—but just say Grace Noir and you've called all the virtues. And her in his house!—"

"You still believe in angels?" inquired Abbott gravely.

"Yap, and devils with long sort-of-curly hair, and pretty womanish faces, and voices like molasses"

"But Fran wants Mrs. Gregory spared—"

"Abbott, when I think of Grace Noir spending one more night under the roof of that burrowing mole, that crocodile with tears in his eyes and the rest of him nothing but bone and gristle—"

"Bob, if I assure you that Miss Noir will never spend another day under his roof, will you agree to keep this discovery to yourself?"

"You can't make no such assurance. If she ain't put wise to what branch of the animal kingdom he twigs to, she'll not leave his roof."

"Bob, if she leaves that house in the morning, for ever, won't you agree to silence, for Mrs. Gregory's sake—and because Fran asks it?"

"Fran's another angel, bless her heart! But you can't work it."

"Leave it to me, Bob. I'll be guided by the spur of the moment."

"I need a bookkeeper at my store," Robert said, ruminating.

"I promise you that Miss Noir will soon be open to offers."

"See here, Abbott, I can't afford to lose any chances on this thing. I'm going to see the feathers fly. No—I don't want Mrs. Gregory to learn about it any more than you or Fran; but I'll limit the thing to Grace—"

"She'd tell Mrs. Gregory."

"Don't you say anything against Grace Noir, Abbott, for though you are my friend—"

"I say nothing against her; I say only that she's a woman."

"Well," Clinton reluctantly agreed, "I reckon she is. I'll tell you what I'll do I'll go with you into that wolf's den, and I'll let you do all the talking; and if you can manage things in half an hour—just thirty minutes by my watch—so that Grace leaves there tomorrow, I'll leave you to steer things, and it's mum for keeps But I'm going to be present, though I don't want to say one word to that—that—But if he don't crawl out of his woof far enough to suit the purpose, in short, if he don't cave, and in half an hour—"

"Half an hour will do the business," said Abbott stoutly. "Come!"

"Be sure to call for Mr. Gregory by himself," said Robert, as they walked swiftly back to the Gregory residence.

If Grace comes into the room while we're talking, or Mrs. Gregory—"

"If they do," Abbott said quickly, "you are not to utter one word; not one, about Springfield—you understand? It's a bargain, and I shall hold you to your word of honor."

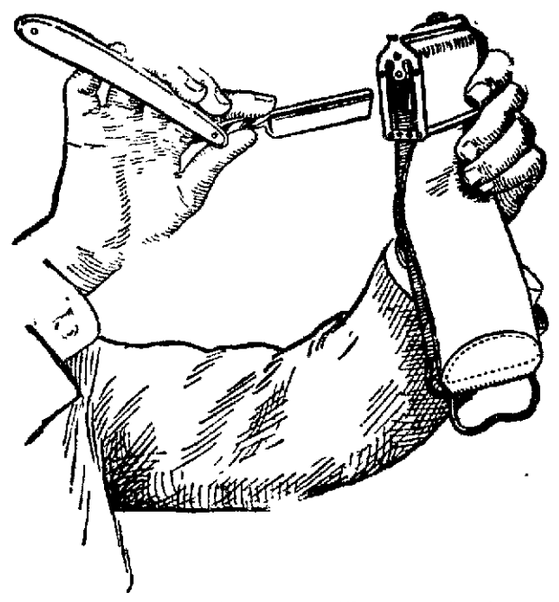

"For half an hour I won't say a word," Clinton declared, "unless it's some word just drawn out of my bosom by the sight of that villain. Come!"

THE SOISSON.

"THE NEW HIGH ROLLERS."

The High Rollers Big Burlesque Company will make its bow to amusement seekers at the Soisson Theatre Friday, January 9. This is unquestionably one of the big hits of the present season. The bill presented is a cornucopia of entertaining features. There are two burlettas, "Looking For a Wife" and "Cafe Bergere," each complete in itself. Nothing funnier than these screaming farces has been presented in many years. They are filled with comedy surprises, alternating with specialties and musical numbers. The melodies are light and tuneful. The solo parts are entrusted to such capable singers as Anne Golden, Ida Stanley and others, and in the chorus of dainty show girls there are many excellent singers and dancers. The fun starts when the curtain ascends and there is no interruption until the final musical number is sung. An all star cast has been engaged and the mounting and costuming are elaborate, no expense having been spared to make the production perfect in every detail.

"UNCLE JOSH SIMPKINS."

"Joshua Simpkins," a four act New England play, will be presented at the Soisson Theatre Saturday matinee and night, January 10. The climax of stage realism, it is asserted, has been reached in the presentation of the stirring saw mill scene in Joshua Simpkins, and will be presented in this city by a peculiar mechanical device which has never been introduced here before. This new mill scene is claimed to be a vast improvement over any attempt in a similar line. The company also boasts of a splendid orchestra, which is carried complete by the organization to aid in the proper presentation of the play, which is said to abound with musical and dancing specialties of a high order. To assist Joshua Simpkins in popularity a band of musicians is also carried and a concert is given which is said to be far above anything usually heard with a traveling musical organization. The parade will leave the theatre at the usual time and take the usual route. Children will all get a box of candy at the matinee.

THE ARCADE.

THREE GOOD ACTS.

The Four Rose Brothers open the Arcade bill for the first three days of this week with a double horizontal bar act that shows great skill. This act usually uses three bars but on account of the width of the local stage are compelled to perform on two. However they make good. The ... Hummlingers, two girls and a man, present a very interesting rathskeller act interspersed with a musical and instrumental turn that is decidedly pleasing. The Three Millards, another trio of two girls and a man, offer a real funny skit called "Zeke ... " that received many laughs. It's a good bill and should draw. The last half of the week ... Hyatt & LeMore's Miniature Musical Comedy Company with seven ... and four ... daily show.

PLEASE REMEMBER, I AM DOING THIS TO BUILD UP A BIG BUSINESS. COME EARLY IN THE MORNING AND EARLY IN THE WEEK AND YOU WILL BE SURE TO GET WAITED ON. OFFICE HOURS 9 A. M. TO 5 P. M.

This "Stevens" offer is an advertising proposition pure and simple—you get an article of superior grade at a special low price—my profit is making 600 new acquaintances and winning their confidence.

Stevens mountings are the best in the world—they occupy the same position in the optical trade as "Rogers Bros. 1847" do in the silver line and "Elgin" or "Waltham" do in the watch business.

SUCH A STARTLING ANNOUNCEMENT no doubt makes you ask if it is absolutely bonafide and if so why I do it. The whole story is this: I have decided to make this unheard of sacrifice of gold filled glasses at $1 to gain the full support and patronage of Connellsville people and thus build up a strong optical business. The lenses are the same I use in my regular line, every one fully guaranteed, and I use just as much care in fitting your eyes. Difficult cases a specialty.

Headaches and nervousness and other troubles far remote from the eyes are ofttimes the direct result of eye strain and the proper glasses will give immediate relief. It is not necessary for the eye to be sore to indicate the need of glasses. In many cases the eye may be perfectly healthy and glasses may be needed for the reasons which are only apparent to the skilled refractionist.

During this wonderful offer I will be in charge and every patient will get scientific examination and glasses properly adjusted. REMEMBER, I am making this offer to build up my business and cannot afford to neglect it. Special prices during offer on specially ground lenses, bifocals and torics.

For balance of week only "Stevens S Q" Gold filled Eyeglass Mountings—every pair guaranteed by the makers—fitted with my own lenses—including examination, $1.00.

All "Stevens" frames and mountings are stamped on the bridge—Stevens S Q—look for it—don't take my word. They are gold filled—not gold plated—permanently guaranteed by Stevens & Company, (Inc.) of Providence R. I., and myself—and will be replaced at any time if they fail to give satisfaction.

Caution about the Use and Selection of Spectacles

Persons having normal vision will be able to read this print at a distance of 14 inches from the eyes with ease and comfort; also will be able to read it with each eye separately. If unable to do so your eyes are defective and should have immediate attention. When the eyes become tired from reading or sewing, or if the letters look blurred and run together it is a sure indication that glasses are needed. The lenses sold in the cheap goods are of unequal density and have imperfectly formed surfaces. Continued use of these poorer lenses will result in positive injury from the constant strain upon the muscles of accommodation to supply the defects in the glass.

$50 REWARD

I have no agents and will pay the above reward for the arrest and conviction of persons claiming to be me or my representatives.

Special Advantages

NOW, as at no other time of the year, women can go through the store and find here and there little heaps (sometimes big lots) of delicate, exquisitely fashioned merchandise showing the marks of handling during the holidays. Some of the things need only the pressure of a hot iron to restore their freshness; other pieces must go into hot suds and through other processes for their restoration.

These things for various reasons—their uncommon beauty, perhaps—impelled admiring people to pick them up, turn them over and lay them down—with a sigh, likely—and so they became mussed and soiled and out-of-place among their crisp, fresh neighbors.

We've priced the "handled" merchandise attractively. It will take but little of your time and ingenuity to make it beautifully fresh and wearable as when careful salespeople filled cases and counters with it only a few weeks ago.

Art Needlework Half Price
—soiled and fresh pieces, too, of stamped and finished needlework; the entire stock—towels and bedding excepted—25c to $13.50 grades—half price.

Maline Ruffs Half Price

Handkerchiefs Fourth Less

Soiled Aprons Third Less

Soiled Linens Third Less
